Only Eight of $93 Men Arrested Held -No Signs of Policemen Said to Have Been Caught in the Raids-How a Tout Got Out on Bail-Talk of Bringing Suits for False Arrest.

All but eight of the 593 men arrested in the poolroom raids Friday night were dis-charged by Magistrate Brann in the Tombs police court yesterday. A representative of the District Attorney and Magistrate Brann both said the others had been arrested illegally. They were released by a general proclamation from the Court.

It was said that ten policemen had been captured in the raids, but if that is true they could not be picked out in the crowd in court yesterday. Forty-one of the prisoners had been unable to secure bail and were locked up all night and brought to court in patrol wagons. Those who had been admitted to bail were notified to be in court at 9 o'clock in the morning and those in custody were produced there at that

The court room was jammed and the overflow slopped into the street and extended as far as Big Tom Foley's bar across the way. For a time the police attempted to keep part of the men outside the court room, as crowding them in meant an almost unendurable state of congestion.

But the point was made by those outside that their cases might be called and their bail forfeited if they were not there to answer. Influenced by this argument the police insisted on every one of the accused going into the court room, and in five minutes the atmosphere suggested the Black Hole of Calcutta. This was the state of affairs when the court was ready to proceed with the cases. But District Attorney Jerome had gone out of town. One of his assistants. Pechner by name, had been assigned to appear in these cases. After a wait of an hour in the stiling court room, a message came from Mr. Pechner that he had been detained uptown and would be down some time between 11 and 12 o'clock. Benjamin Steinhardt, who appeared as attorney for the prisoners, complained of this hardship. It was bad enough, he said, to keep the men from business; it was criminal to confine so many in one room. An officer was sent to the District Attorney's office to see if he could find one of the assistants. None of Mr. Jerome's young men had come down.

Meanwhile Magistrate Breen went on with the other cases before him, while the poolroom prisoners mopped their faces and swore. When 11 o'clock came around acting District Attorney Taylor strolled into the building on his way to his office He was intercepted and brought to court It seemed to be the prevailing opinion that the dignity of an acting District Attorney would be jarred by an appearance in a

"Why did the police arrest so many? said Mr. Taylor. "It seems to me their conduct was clearly illegal."

With this pronouncement he got into an elevator and was lifted to his office. The jam in the court room renewed its efforts to breathe. Mr. Taylor said he thought one of his assistants whose station would permit him to appear in a police court would permit him to appear in a police court would be down before long.

Assistant District Attorney Lord straggled in half an hour later. After consulting with Magistrate Breen he said he saw no reason why the prisoners other than the principals should not be dismissed. Eight men who were picked out by the police as owners, managers or employees of poolrooms were brought inside the court room rail. Sergt. Lynch announced that he rest were dismissed. Lawyer Steinhardt wanted warrants for Inspector Smith, Capt. Hogan and Policeman Lynch for assault in the third degree, which covers false arrest. Magistrate Breen aske him if he had any affidavits on which to ask for the warrants. He replied that he could get some, but the Magistrate advised him that if the prisoners had any remedy it was in civil suits. When their freedom was proclaimed the prisoners celebrated by many cheers for the Magistrate and hisses for the police. Then they made their way into the air and set out for the racetrack, most of them. set out for the racetrack, most of them, vowing that in the Great Triel Stakes there was but one horse to play, and that

The warrants which Magistrate Breen had issued and on which the raids were made named from five to fifteen members of the Doe family in each and purported to give a description of each. In making the arr stathe police paid no attention to these descriptions. The affidavits on which the warrants were issued alleged that the several Does "did violete Section 351 of the Penal Code by keeping a paming establishment."

Not more than three persons were taken on any one of these warrants. The eight men who were held gave the enames:
Charles Van Horn, arrested at 191 Mercer street; Thomas Schwarkle and William Connor, arrested at 151 West Fourth street, John A. Scott, Thomas Clinton and James Hands, arrested at The Allen's, 80 Sixth avenue; Nicholas T. White and Frank Ross, arrested at 30 East Twelfth street. All were paroled in the custody of their counsel for examination Wednesday before Magistrate Flammer.

Mr. Sabboth's friends heard of his predicament and sent a bondsman around to the station house. The man who was to furnish bail did not know Sabboth by sight, so he had the police sergeant announce to the crowd of prisoners that he was, there to bail Sabboth. Sabboth in the back of the room could not hear the announcement. At the second calling a dapper young tout said: "Oh, that's me," and stepping up was let to bail under the name of Sabboth. The real owner of the name of Sabboth. The real owner of the name had to spend the night in a cell with two other prisoners. Edward Burt, 17 years old, said he was walking along Sixth avenue in front of The. Allen's place when he stopped to see what the excitement was about. Just then the police came out with their prisoners. One officer grabbed young Burt, who protested. "I saw you inside. I remember now," said the officer and Burt was lugged to the station house, where he was locked up all night. Both Sabboth and Burt promise to sue the city for damages for false arrest.

Sylvester F. Wilson, alias Frank W. Hartright, alias W. S. Franklin, and a dozen other names, but best known as the originator of the female baseball club, was arrested yesterday at 44 West Ninetyninth street on an indictment for abduction and put in the Tombs. He has done time for the same offence. As the indictment this time is for a second offence he may get twenty years if convicted. Last January Wilson advertised as fol-

The advertisement was so like the one Wilson had printed over the name of Frank Watkins several years ago, asking for young girls to play baseball that the Children's society promptly started an investigation. Detectives Pisarra and Fogarty soon learned that the advertiser was Wilson, who had assumed the name of Hartright.

who had assumed the name of Hartright. They also learned that the young women were wanted to play basketban and that those already engaged were practising at Brady's Dancing Academy, 135-137 west 125th street and at other places.

On May 21 Pisaira and rogarty followed Wilson and nine young girls to the foot of West Tenth street, where all boarded the Chrystenan, of the Hudson River day line. At Peekskill the Wilson party put up at Lynch's Hotel. Lynch is a Justice of the Peace and was interested in Electric Park, Peace and was interested in Liectric Park, Peace and was interested in Electric Fairs, Peachskill. The temale basketball teams were advertised to play for a week in the park and then to make a championship tour of the State.

Pisarra and Fogarty returned to the city and managed to locate the parents of one of the girls, Mary Foley, at 68 West 101st street. Through the girl, later, they were able to reach the homes of all the girls. On the night of May 27 the first week's salary of the basketball players fell due. Wilson put them off until morning and at 3 o'clock on the morning of the 28th was seen going down the railroad tracks. In the morning Bachlom, the "angel," refused to pay the week's board bill and salary and started out to find Wilson. Squire Lynch forgave the young women their board bill and paid their passage back to this city. Pisarra and Fogarty found Maggie Dean, 15 years old, of 1852 Park avenue, one of the girls deserted by Wilson, and on her testimony, corroborated by that of the Foley girl, Wilson was indicted last Monday.

Bachlom, by the way, in his pursuit of Wilson, had started on May 29 for Astoria because one of the girls lived there and he expected to find Wilson hanging around. He met Wilson at the ferry and they got into a fight in which both were arrested. In the Long Island City police court Magistrate Connorton entertained a complaint against Wilson of obtaining money on false pretences, but Bachlom afterward dropped the complaint.

LED THE LIFE OF A SLAVE. Boy Missing From Buffalo for Twelve

Weeks Found Working for a Farmer. BUFFALO, June 27 .- For about twelve weeks the local police worked ineffectually trying to find William Goehring, who disappeared from his home, at 1344 Broadway, on April 3 last. It was thought that the boy was drowned, but his body did not turn up at the Morgue, and then it was believed that he had run away from home. This morning the boy was brought to Buffalo from Bennington Centre, Erie county, and according to his story he praccounty, and according to his story he practically led the life of a slave, his keeper being a farmer of that place. The lad informed the police that he was induced to go to a house in Walden avenue, beyond the city line, by a man who represented himself to be a friend of his family. When he got to the house he was watched closely for several days; then the farmer from Bennington Centre came to the house and took him away.

Geraldine Redmond, the daughters of John Livingston. It is a memorial to their mother, Mrs. Sylvia Livingston. The building alone cost more than $50,000.

The chapel is in the English Gothic style and is built of bluestone quarried at Tivoli, and trimmed with Connecticut bluestone of a lighter shade. It is 97 feet long and 50 feet wide and is surmounted by a Norman tower containing a 500-pound bell. The tower reaches a height of about eighty feet.

The interior of the chapel is lined with a rich-colored pressed brick. The arching of the roof is of heavy timber, gracefully panelled and richly tinted. The altar is of Vermont marble, and the sanctuary flooring of delicate mosaic. The altar decorations, candelabra, altar rail and crucifix were imported from France. The chapel will seat 400.

LIFE IN NEWPORT'S SEASON. Sunshiny Day Brings Out the Cottagers -Luncheons and Dinners.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 27 .- Newport took on life and activity to-day when the sun came out. As a result this afternoon the ocean drive was crowded with fashionable turnouts. For the first time this season there was life shown at Spouting Rock Beach, familiarly known as Bailey's Beach, and during the noon hour a large number of the cottagers enjoyed a dip in the surf. The tennis courts at this place were also used, and at the Casino the demand was so great for the courts that many had to be turned away. There is no doubt that tennis is to be the popular sport, and a few think that the efforts of the governors of the Country Club to revive interest in golf will meet with great success. It was also quite a day for entertainments, and this evening a large party of cottagers visited the open-air theatre. Luncheons were given by Mrs. C. H. Baldwin and Mrs. William Payne Thompson, and this evening cottage dinners were given by Mrs. E. H. G. Slater, Miss Anna Sands and Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore, the latter being in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Allen, who are her guests. With the arrival of the racing yachts there was much activity shown in the harbor, and to-night there is a large fleet at anchor and several dinners were given on shipboard. How Poor Are Fleeced. Abraham Bloch, a money lender of 365 Grand street, is to answer a charge of usury before Magistrate Breen on July 8 next, and at that hearing it is expected that some interesting facts will be presented with reference to the practices of money lenders among the poor people of the East

The complaint on which Bloch was arrested was made by Rabbi Abraham Heller of 13 Pitt street. Rabbi Heller's affidavit is that on Jan. 21 last he borrowed $100 of Bloch, for which he gave a note for four months and a chattel motgage on all his possessions. The rabbi affirms that for twenty-five weeks he paid Bloch $5 a week interest, a total of $125 on a $100 loan, and that Bloch refused to surrender the note although the rabbi called upon him many although the rabbi called upon him many times to do so.

The rabbi then laid the matter before the District Attorney and Bloch, on arraignment, was held in $500 bail, which was furnished. The detectives of the District Attorney's office seized Bloch's books, and they are held as proofs on which it is expected to prove the defendant's usurious practices.

All quarters of the city where there is a dense population of people in narrowed cir-dense population of people in narrowed cir-cumstances swarm with shark money lenders who extort outrageous interest for their money advances. An east sider identified with the case against Bloch cited an instance yesterday of a Jewish pedler who borrowed $20 of one of these money lenders, giving as security a chattel mort-gage on all his furniture. He was to pay $1.60 a week for the advance. After making five payments he was in straits again and borrowed $5 more. For this he had to give as security the receipts for his former five payments on the original $20 loan, as well

MONKEY CAGE FOR PRISONERS. Chief of Police Buys One From a Circus -Two Buildogs Guard St. VERONA, N. J., June 27. Chief of Police Wettyen of this place has a jail in his barn. It is a cage similar to those used in circuses for monkeys. In fact, Chief

Wettyen purchased the cage to-day from a passing circus. It now occupies a prominent position alongside of a pair of buildings, where any prisoners who may here after be landed therein will find it are impossibility to escape.

Several prisoners have escaped recently because the little town has no lockup. Chief Wettyen has been obliged to manace, his prisoners, particularly those of a descripte character.
